

of the original edition (which did not have as wide a sale as it deserved) this edition warrants an order. There is not enough change, however, to require purchase of the second edition if one has the first.

The more general reader, who is not familiar with or able to appreciate technical details, is still under obligation to familiarize himself with Walker's points of view in the chapters on criterial and legal aspects of cerebral death and others on public reaction and broad implications. As he says, "Although the basic concepts of cerebral death have gained general acceptance, there are many ramifications of the problems. . . . Their resolution will require drastic changes in the conceptualization of life and death."

FRED A. METTLER, M.D., Ph.D.

ERRATA

The following corrections apply to articles appearing in the November 1981 issue.

On page 759 one of Dr. Oscar Auerbach's affiliations was omitted: Distinguished Physician, Veterans Administration Medical Center, East Orange N.J.

The correct name for the author of the article on Hodgkin's disease, beginning on page 776, is Sherwin B. Nuland, M.D.